AWAY WE GO

A travel feature presented by The Automobile Club of Va.

Chattanooga, Tenn.- Long before Tin Pan Alley discovered the "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and the "Chattanooga Shoe Shine Boy," this city was famous for its outstanding mountain scenery and a Civil War Battlefield that compares with Gettysburg.

Now throngs of visitors from all parts of the country are stopping off here to view these highlights of the Mid-South for themselves. Few, if any are disappointed.

They spend their time in touring the surrounding mountains, including the famed Lookout Mountain, and in capturing the flavor of Civil War history at Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park. This, the oldest and largest of national military parks, was established in commemoration of two battles fought for control of Chattanooga, then a great strategic center between the Eastern and Western sections of the Confederate States.

The battle zone was rugged terrain . . no open fields, nor even level woods, but the high peaks of Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. It is a striking sight, in driving up the mountain to view the gun emplacements exactly as they were many years ago: there are cannons resting on shaded lawns, and one even points directly into the front door of a recently built private home!

The two-day battle of Chickamauga was one of the fiercest single engagements of the Civil War. The Confederates, though they won the engagement, paid dearly — 18,000 killed, wounded and missing out of a force of 66,000. They permitted the Union Army to retreat to Chattanooga and in a few months to turn defeat of a battle into victory of a campaign. This opened the way to future operations of General Sherman in Georgia and South Carolina.

The battlefield tour leads to some of the finest military monuments and memorials in America and those who stop at park headquarters are treated to an excellent introductory lecture illustrated with an electric map.

Besides its history, Chattanooga offers a full quota of scenery. Lookout Mountain is the best known of its natural points of interest. An experience, not soon forgotten, is a trip to the top of the mountain by the most direct route . . aboard the incline tramway. The incline track ascends straight up the face of the mountain for a distance of nine-tenths of a mile, reaching an altitude of 2,450 feet above sea level. At one point the grade is almost 73 degrees, the steepest passenger incline in the world.

The sight by dark: one galexy of stars in the heavens and another in the valley below. If the incline looks too steep, motoring is just as sure a way to reach the top. The mountain is rich in floral growth from spring through fall, from the blooms of white and pink dogwood, through the season of mountain laurel and rhododendron, to scarlet and gold of changing foliage. There are other attractions too . . such as Ruby Falls; the original Tom Thumb golf course, and Rock City Gardens.

Chattanooga, besides all this, is in the geographic center of the great Tennessee Valley; nearby is 32-million-dollar Chickamauga Dam, a marvel in modern engineering. And it is the southern gateway to the Great Smokey Mountains, and their storehouse of scenic adventure. With all its attractions, Chattanooga is the kind of friendly place that adds up to plenty of travel enjoyment.
